

ANTYPSYCHIATRY

COPYRIGHT

(C)

2022

BY

W C VETSCH

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

IF YOU LIKE THIS YOU SHOULD SAVE IT YOURSELF SINCE INTERNET STABILITY IS NOT GUARANTEED

INTRODUCTION

Why would anyone want to criticize all these great doctors who are dedicated to curing all these terrible mental illnesses. People do so maybe they have a good reason. Let's take a closer look and see if we can figure all this stuff out.

HISTORY OF PSYCHIATRY

Psychiatry drifted into existence sometime after the inception of science. There were no treatments for "strange people" so, originally, they were just "put away" somewhere where "ordinary people" could not see them. Psychiatry adopted the rules of science - "If you can't see it, then it does not exist" - and clings to scientific atheism to this day. The first "treatment" appears to have been lobotomy. This has now been outlawed in most areas. The book "My Lobotomy" by Howard Dully is the true story of a twelve year old boy who given a lobotomy. He recovered because he was developing at the time and his brain was able to create a "work around" to compensate for the damage. Obviously, since he wrote the book, the recovery was successful. His book is still in print.

This incident illustrates a very important point. Everyone knows this is destructive. It is so destructive it is outlawed today. The question is, how can you call deliberate brain damage a "treatment". And, guess what, all the later "treatments" are also destructive. Nothing that psychiatrists do is beneficial to the patient (victim). It actually appears that any chemical you can discover that will mess someone up but not kill them (right away) can be marketed as a "treatment for mental illness".

There is a social safety net in the US (social security disability) and many other countries, however, even as late as the 1960's, social security in the US did not recognize any of psychiatry's impressive list of "illnesses" as a disability. Fortunately, this has changed. However, previously, patients discharged from "hospital" were told. "You are cured (even though you can't remember your name) and you need to go find a job and support yourself". Finding decent employment is hard enough for people who have not been brain damaged. Psychiatrists saw this as a business opportunity. So, they made contracts with organizations that wanted to "buy" brain damaged patients. Also, they could pay the slaves less than minimum wage because they could call the slave labor "rehabilitation". Discharged patients would be sent to some "aftercare" type place and put to work. Generally, females were told they should become janitors and a favorite for males was to make them welders. Of course, the doctors were paid for providing cheap slave labor.

When social security recognized these "illnesses" as a disability all this stuff ended and these people were guaranteed a livable income for life.

Now, psychiatry is supported, mainly by state governments. Why? Simple: you see psychiatry gets poor marks for curing "illnesses" but it gets excellent marks as system for dealing with "political prisoners". Think "incorrectly" - criticize the government - well, you have a mental illness and there is a place for you so that the establishment will not have to be concerned about you ever again. Beginning to get the message?

CCHR opposes psychiatry and has had luck in stopping some abuses. The website for CCHR is cchr.org . The documentaries produced by CCHR are not "hate films". They are well sourced and accurate. Recommended you have a look at them and "let the chips fall where they may".

ALL ABOUT MK (MIND KONTROLLE)

MK Ultra was the secret project you were never supposed to know existed. However, you know those "best laid plans" go so, thanks to the Church Commission we do know.

When WWII ended, there was a rush to snatch German doctors and scientists because they were smarter. Most landed in the US under a secret plan known as "Operation Paperclip". Doctors were given "color names". Josef Mengele was Dr. Green. The Nazi scientists started NASA, while the doctors continued human experiments under MK Ultra. Please bear in mind, however, that regardless of their talents, these people are still NAZI's and cling to the NAZI philosophy.

MK Ultra was exposed by the Church Commission and the Church Commission revealed the subprojects and the institutions who participated. The Church Commission is history, however MK Ultra is not. The project never ended and continues today under different "code names". One of the earlier names was "Project Other" and one of the more recent names was "Marathon". So, the game goes on.

SECRET TRIALS

To get a judge to authorize psychiatrists to lock up someone forever and do whatever they please to them, the victim is taken to a "secret trial". Now, since any witnesses could face some danger from this crazy person, they can testify in secret. So, the victim never knows the "evidence" against him or who testifies. So the Judge says, "You have been accused of 'mental illness' - prove you are innocent". Well, you can't prove a "double negative" and so you are always guilty and "off you go" to a life of unbearable torture.

Now, if this sounds familiar, consider the Witchcraft trials: You are brought before the "Inquisitor" who says, "You have been accused of practicing Witchcraft. Prove you are not a Witch". Well, you can't prove a double negative, so you will soon be burned at the stake. So, off you go.

Now, one could argue that they did not have Logic (which is a legitimate science) textbooks back then but they certainly do now. Guess logic is not taught in medical school.

DRUG FACTS

SIGMUND FREUD

People believe Sigmund Freud was "the father of psychiatry". This is not true. Sigmund Freud was an Austrian neurologist and the founder of psychoanalysis. His beliefs and teachings have no relationship to the practice of psychiatry today. Also, no drugs were available at the time Freud was practicing his methods. Everything he did concerned a relationship between a person and another person talking about their life and problems. No drugs or other "treatments".

EARLY TECHNIQUES

Psychiatrists believed in "treatments" - not talking. Early "treatments" were brutal.

Lobotomy

Lobotomy was simple. All you needed to do was to hold someone down and jab something like an ice pick into their brain usually through the eye. Then you wiggled the ice pick around to physically sever connections in the brain. The damaged victim was essentially then a vegetable although still alive. The damage was not reversible.

A great example was Rosemary Kennedy - a child of the famous Kennedy family. There was nothing wrong with this young girl, however she scored poorly on "achievement tests". The Kenney's felt that she would soon be mature enough to consider marriage and that any children she might have would not be up to the Kennedy standard for intelligence and so "embarrass the family name". So, they paid a doctor to give her a lobotomy and then paid to have her warehoused somewhere until she died. Since this was a "medical procedure" - even though it was effectively murder - it was considered perfectly legal under the law. You can look up her story on the internet if you are interested.

Shock Treatments

One day a "doctor" (or at least someone who called himself a doctor) happened to visit a slaughter house where cattle were being lined up to be killed. He noticed that some device was placed on the creature's head just before it was killed. This device caused the victim to become unconscious so that it would not be awake when killed. He bought one of these devices and went to the local Sheriff proclaiming he had discovered a "treatment" for people who were violent or could not otherwise be easily controlled and asked the Sheriff to let him know the next time he captured such a person.

When the Sheriff told him he had arrested some such person, the "doctor" rushed over with the cattle device. They grabbed the victim and put the device on his head and pushed the button (or whatever) and the victim immediately fell to the floor unconscious. When the victim awoke, he was confused and seemed calm. The "doctor" immediately proclaimed he has discovered a new "treatment" and, eventually, all "doctors" started using the cattle stun device. This was the origin of what is today called ECT (Electro Convulsive Treatment). Since this practice began before the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) was created, it was "grand fathered in" and never tested. It is still in use today but is classified as a "high risk" device and doctors who want to use it must buy extra malpractice insurance. The FDA has, however, limited the output of the device to 140 volts at 900 milliamps (9/10's of one amp). However, if a standard 100 watt light bulb was connected to this gadget, this would be enough power to cause the lamp to light so bright that it would burn out or possibly even explode.

Shock treatments are typically given in a series of 21 treatments spaced a few days apart.

Shock treatments are also used as threats to frighten patients into obeying orders. Another favorite use is to cover up rape. Shock treatments permanently erase current memories and they cannot be recovered. So, if doctors get their hands on a cute girl, everyone that wants to rape her has a turn and then her memory of the event is erased with a shock treatment. This is pretty common in state hospitals.

DCI (Deep Coma Insulin)

This is the technique used on the victim in the feature film "A Beautiful Mind" - <https://www.imdb.com/title/tt0268978/> Essentially, if someone is given an overdose of insulin, they will fall into a coma and the brain will begin to die. If not corrected, the person will also die. So this "treatment" is designed to cause a certain amount of brain death. However, the victim is revived before actual death occurs. Of course, they are not exactly the same anymore and this is believed to be "beneficial". If the "doctors" don't cause enough brain damage the first time, the process is repeated.

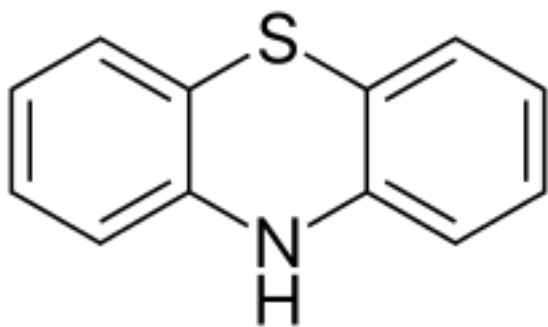

DR. PETER BREGGIN / TRANSITION FROM TALK TO DRUG

Dr. Peter Breggin - breggin.com - is a practicing psychiatrist who does not believe in drugs. In interviews, Breggin describes that the change in how psychiatry is practiced happened while he was in medical school. Chemists and doctors argued that it was a costly waste of time to talk to disturbed people when you could use drugs to damage their brains so that they either could not remember whatever was bothering them or were so confused that they simply did not care anymore. With drugs, you could make a lot more money because you could have thousands of "patients" - all strung out on drugs - and collect the same amount of money you made before by just talking to a few patients only this way you could make huge profits because there would be no limit to the amount of people you could drug. Gradually, the idea caught on and this is the way psychiatry is practiced today.

PHENOTHIAZINE

This is phenothiazine:

Scientists found this chemical because it was a poison used by exterminators to kill "pests". They became very interested in this chemical when they discovered that it had the ability to cross the "blood/brain barrier". The blood/brain barrier is a natural protection all people have and it exists to prevent harmful substances in the blood to get into the brain. Chemists reasoned that any alien elements attached to phenothiazine would also be allowed to cross the blood/brain barrier and therefore influence a person's mind and body in unintended ways. So, the first group of psychiatric "drugs" were called phenothiazines because they were all based upon various modifications to this pest control poison then in use by exterminators.

DOPAMINE RECEPTORS

There are five known dopamine receptors in the brain. They are called simply, D1, D2, D3, D4 and D5. Scientists believe there is a sixth dopamine receptor, however, so far their search has been futile and no D6 has been found. Dopamine is a chemical that allows different parts of the brain to communicate internally. If a receptor is blocked (inhibited), then the ability of the brain to function normally is affected. Some drugs only block one receptor. Some block more than one and a few block all five receptors. To know exactly what receptors a drug will block, you will need to look it up on Wikipedia. The manufacture's information will not tell you. All they will say is "the site and mode of action is unknown". This is a lie. It is completely known but the government allows them to say that because no one wants you to know what the drug will actually do to you. However, doctors know.

When people are first given psychiatric drugs - which usually occurs when they are locked up in some type of prison called a "hospital" - they go through a period of confusion. What happens during this period is that the brain tries to correct the damage the drug(s) are doing by creating alternate pathways to allow internal communication to take place. Eventually, the brain uses these new pathways although this causes the person to function at diminished capacity. At this point, the patient is pronounced "cured" and told they must take the drugs for the rest of their lives. Then they are handed off to some type of "outpatient facility" where they are watched. If they stop taking the drugs, the brain will try to switch back to the original - normal - pathways. However, this will cause another period of confusion. If this is noticed - and it will be because they are specifically looking for this - the person will be locked up again and this time the torture will be much worse.

So, if you want to get off the drugs, the first thing you need to do is to get away from doctors and find someplace safe where they cannot find you.

JUST WHAT IS "PSYCHOTIC"

Basically, you call someone "psychotic" if they believe something that is not true. However, obviously, this is a subjective judgment and it depends on what the observer - the psychiatrist - either knows is true or believes is true. Since most scientific people are atheists, if you say anything remotely Spiritual, you will be labeled psychotic (specifically schizophrenic) because atheists do not believe God exists and they also generally do not believe that anything exists beyond observable materialistic reality. So, the only way you could make an accurate judgment that someone was psychotic would be if you, personally, knew everything about everything. This would be highly unlikely.

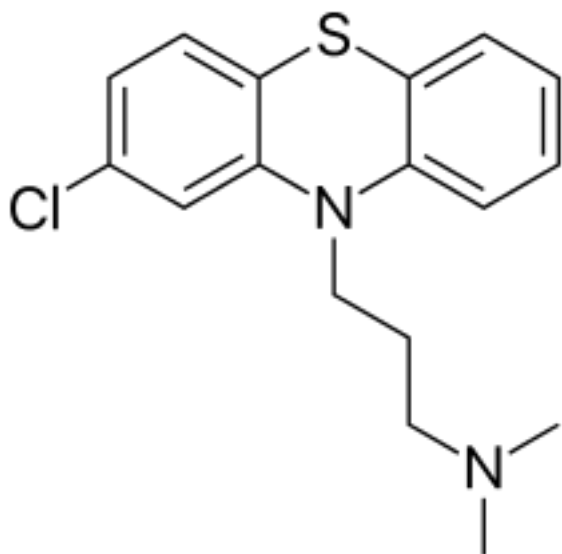

TYPICAL ANTIPSYCHOITS

Typical antipsychotics are drugs based upon phenothiazine. There are quite a few of them now so we will just discuss the original group. The first drug in this group was promazine.

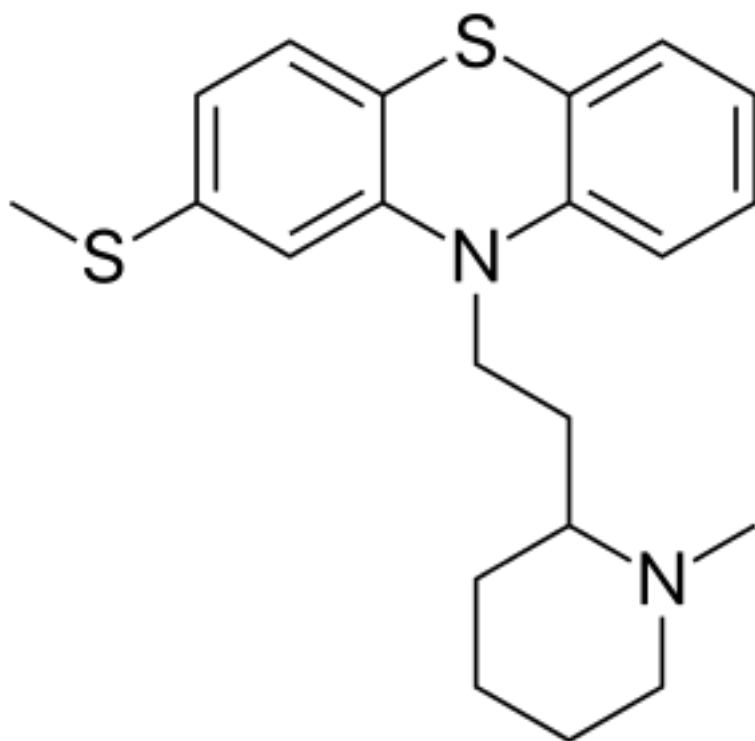

It was sold under the name "Sparine"

However, soon the drug company SK&F took promazine and simply added one chlorine atom to create chlorpromazine - sold as Thorazine.

It was an instant hit. Thorazine was shipped as a liquid in gallon bottles to essentially all state mental hospitals. No one even bothered to consider the dose. They would just pour out a small cup of the stuff and make all the "patients" drink it. Shortly, the victims collapsed in a chair or whatever. They were not unconscious but had no energy and, apparently, no desire to do anything. You could shake them and awaken them but they would soon return to the "veggie" state. This was absolutely great for the staff because they did not have to do anything. Just drug them and forget about them. They loved it!

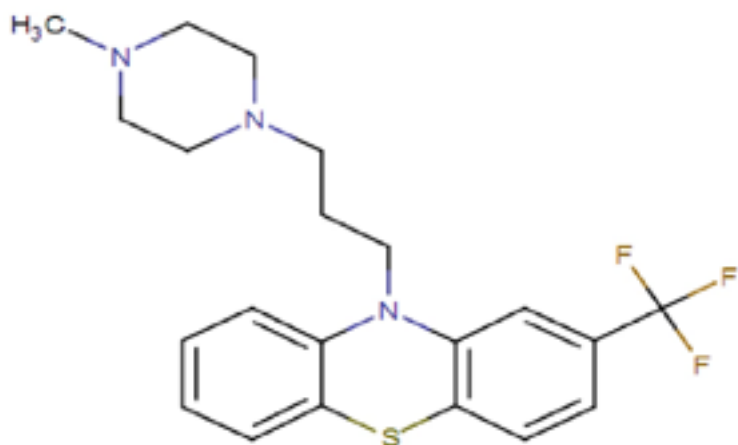

The next "creation" was "thioridazine". The prefix "thio" indicates sulfur.

Thioridazine - sold as Mellaril - is a sterilization drug. It works on both men and women. In men, it prevents ejaculation. In women, it shuts down the whole reproductive system. Periods stop. A strange side effect is that many girls start producing milk - as if they just had a baby.

Of course, this was an instant hit too and was shipped in liquid form to state hospitals where it was given to essentially everyone to make sure there were no pregnancies - hospital staff absolutely loved the stuff and it is still in use today.

The next drug in the original group was trifluoperazine - sold as Stelazine.

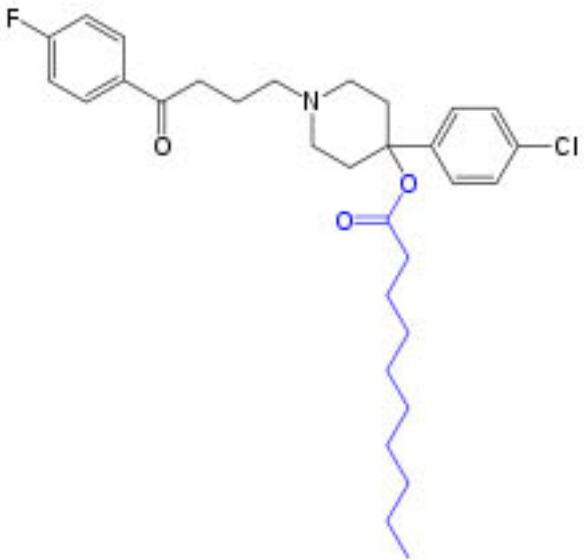

What you need to notice in the model is the "cross shaped" extension with three Fluoride atoms. This drug is designed to cause the pineal gland to calcify - essentially killing it. We will discuss this in detail later on.

ATYPICAL ANTIPSYCHOTICS

Atypical antipsychotics are drugs that are not based upon phenothiazine. There are lots of them and more are in the works. They are typically more dangerous than the typical drugs and can shorten your life by about 35 years. The typical drugs will shorten your life by about 25 years. Some atypical drugs are so dangerous that people taking them must get a blood test about every week to make sure they are not about to die from the drug.

A popular atypical drug is haloperidol - sold as Haldol:

It is not based upon phenothiazone. Originally, Haldol was sold as 1/2 mg. pills with lots of warnings. However, as time passed, doctors at state hospitals got curious and wanted to see how much of this stuff could be given to the victim without killing them. Apparently, it was quite a lot and soon Haldol was sold as 5, 10 and sometimes 20 mg. pills. The manufacturer claimed that this drug had "a subtle reorganizing effect on thought processes" (brainwashing?). The diagram above shows the long acting form of Haldol called Haldol Deconate. It is insoluble in water and is sold dissolved in sesame oil. One shot lasts an entire month. However, ordinary Haldol takes forever to get out of your system so the long acting form would clearly last much longer than only one month.

UNDERSTANDING THE PINEAL GLAND

It is very important that you understand the Pineal gland located in the head. Everyone has one but few know what it does. First, the pineal gland is the physical link to your "third eye". Everyone has one of these too but it remains closed in the majority of people. The actual third eye is not in your physical body. It is in your Astral body. Let's try to simply explain the significance of the third eye. Suppose you were sitting in a chair and there were a set of shelves on the wall. You can see all the shelves and what is in them. Now, suppose you live on one of those shelves. The sky is the bottom of the next higher shelf and the ground is the shelf you live on. You and everyone else you know lives there. You are born there and spend your whole life there. You have no idea that the other shelves exist or that beings live there too. However, if your third eye was open, it would be like you were back in the chair where you could see all the shelves and you could communicate with whatever lived there. You would be wide awake on "your shelf" but you could also see other shelves too. This is the power of the third eye and why local dictators don't want you to know you have it because - once you see the other shelves (dimensions) - they lose the power to control you because you now know the truth. So, you become a "threat". Fluoride causes the pineal gland to calcify and cease to function and that is why it is added to drinking water. Hitler added small amounts of sodium fluoride to the water in his camps. His scientists said doing this caused a "mild lobotomy".

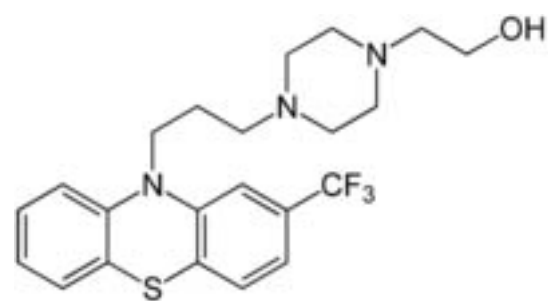

There is one other function of the pineal gland that is essential to your future beyond this life. The pineal gland manufactures and stores a chemical known as DMT (N,N-Dimethyltryptamine) which can be made synthetically and is a Schedule I controlled substance in the US. This chemical cause you to have a "trip" - similar to LSD - but much shorter. When your body knows it is about to die, the pineal gland performs its final function. It releases all the DMT it has made into your body. This allows you to break free of your physical body and ascend to the Astral Plane. However, if the pineal gland has been calcified by chemicals, it cannot do this. What this means is that you may not have enough psychic energy to cross the zone of darkness which separates this plane of existence from the Astral Plane. In this case, you will wander the Earth in your Astral body as what people call a "ghost". You will be able to see and hear them but they won't be able ti see you unless they are psychic. You could remain in this state for thousands of years. It is a terrible fate. Your only hope is that some advanced Soul from the Astral Plane has mercy on you and literally drags you up through the barrier to the Astral Plane where you belong.

So, now that we have hopefully impressed upon you how important the pineal gland is, let's look at some ways the government uses to kill (calcify) the pineal gland.

Two drugs designed to kill (calcify) the pineal gland are Stelazine and Prolixin. Both have the same "cross shaped" extension containing three fluorine atoms:

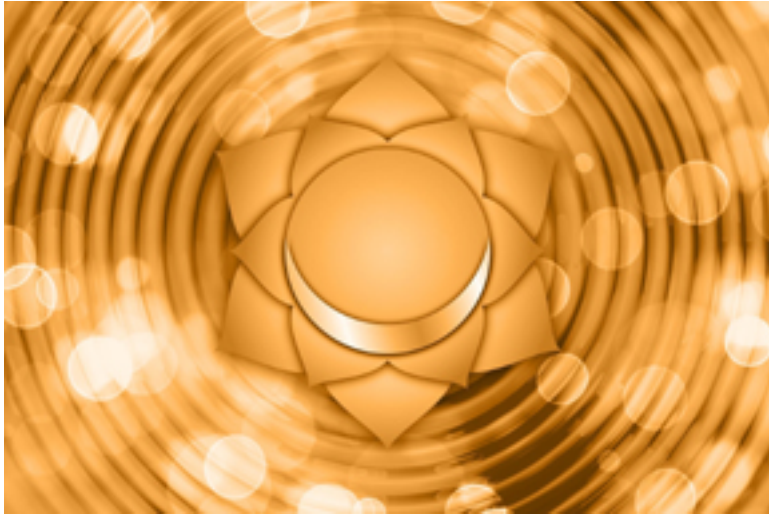

DRUGS THAT KILL

This is Fluphenazine. It is sold under the brand name "Prolixin" and is generally used in its long acting form, Prolixin Deconate. This chemical is insoluble in water and is sold as an injection dissolved in sesame oil. According to Wikipedia. this drug will last in your system for at least four weeks. Now, this drug is sold in a small bottle containing only five cc's of the drug for a total of 125 mg. The most likely reason is because 150 mg. or six cc's of this drug is a lethal dose. However, psychiatrists like to inject people with three cc's every two weeks They assume that by the second week, enough of the drug will be metabolized so that the remaining amount will keep you below the lethal level of 150 mg. However, there is no guarantee of this because different people have different rates of metabolism. So, for some, the second shot will be a lethal dose. There are no statistics on how many people psychiatrists have killed with this drug. Toxicology tests done by coroners look for commonly abused drugs but do not test for psychiatric drugs. So, these deaths are usually listed as "unclassified"..

SCHIZOPHRENIA

Schizophrenia is caused by problems associated with the natural activation of the Sacral Chakra. This is the Sacral Chakra (<https://www.bemytravelmuse.com/sacral-chakra/>)

"The sacral chakra, or swadisthana chakra in Sanskrit, has received the nicknames, "the sex chakra," "the social chakra," and "the creation chakra." Located in the center of the lower belly or, as some believe, in the genital area, it acts as the individual's center of pleasure and passion — both sensually and creatively. This chakra governs reproductive systems and processes, sexuality, relationships, emotions, and sense of adventure."

This would explain why schizophrenia is called a "young person's disease" because the Sacral Chakra activities as one becomes sexually mature. Any competent psychic healer could easily correct any problems associated with the opening of this chakra, however, psychiatrists are atheists and do not believe in chakras or psychic "anything". So, they damage the victim with drugs which cause sterility, brain damage and an early death. The most powerful and dangerous drugs are authorized to be used on people labeled schizophrenic. Some are so dangerous that frequent blood tests are required to make sure the victim does not die. Many die anyway.

THE ZOMBIE GENERATION

Today, it has become common to force drug children. Any teacher can accuse a kid of being "mentally ill" for essentially any reason. Parents are ordered to make sure the kid is kept drugged. If they refuse, their child is snatched away by "child protection" and they will likely never see them again. The most popular drug is a mixture of amphetamines (Schedule II) given when the kid does not seem to be paying attention in class. Kids who are actively disobedient are given other psychiatric drugs. Risperdal - (Risperidone) - a drug which causes young boys to develop as if they were girls and grow breasts is a popular drug.

The result, obviously, is that we are raising a generation of zombies who will likely be sterile, incompetent and incapable of functioning in present society except for very low level jobs like janitors and street sweepers.

ORIGON OF SCIENCE

Way back when, the Catholic Church ruled. There was a man named Galileo who you may have heard of who wrote a proof that the Earth revolved around the Sun. However, the Church said the Sun revolved around the Earth. Disagreeing with Church Doctrine would normally get you put to death at that time because "Big Brother is Always Right". So, Galileo was snatched and taken before the Pope to be judged. The Pope said, "Galileo, we have always known the Earth revolved around the Sun but we decide what people should know and when they should know. I will not order you killed because you are right, however you cannot go around telling people the truth and contradicting Church doctrine. You must keep quiet about this!"

Incidentally, Vatican archives go on for miles and contain all history going back to 10,000 BC (which is the "Age of Leo" - if you understand the precession of the equinoxes). You can't see this, but they can.

Now, as more people got smarter and realized that the fairy tales told by the Church were nonsense, like minded people got together and said, "There is got to be a better way. We want the real truth". This was the beginning of science. So, it was decided to search for real truth and set up rules. The first rule was, "If we can't see it, then it does not exist". So, science began on it's quest.

Now, down the road there were people who called themselves "doctors". They followed the rules of science. They did not take baths or wash their hands because there was no reason to do that. So, when rich people went to a doctor to say, have a baby, the doctor worked with dirty hands going from woman to woman. The chances for survival for the mom and/or baby were slim. However, poor women who had their kids at home and breast fed them, had a much higher success rate.

Then, the microscope was invented. Wow, look at all these little things you never could see before. This was awful. So, doctors said, "If this is true, we must bathe and clean up. We don't want to go to this extra trouble so we will say this is some trick." Eventually, they had to accept this and start bathing. Gee, life's a bitch.

So, science stumbled along down the road they believed would lead to truth. All this time, of course, the core philosophy of science was "scientific atheism". Time passed and people got pretty smart. Then, a physicist named Richard Phillips Feynman wrote a formal proof that the Universe could only come to exist by "Intelligent Design". Scientists had no choice but to accept this because the proof complied with the rules of science. Now, however, there was a problem the scientific atheists thought they would never face. Once you say "intelligent design", you start down a slippery slope that will take you to places you never knew and silently hoped you would never see.

Let's look back to the beginning and the Pope. Truth destroys illusions. Pope knew that feared the church would lose control should truth be revealed. You see, everyone on this planet is trapped in invisible chains because they live under some belief system that controls their lives. If you destroy this with real truth, society will collapse.

Fortunately, scientists hang out with other scientists and generally don't talk to regular people. So, the world is "safe from the truth" - at least for now. You may think this knowledge is locked away in a vault somewhere where no one can find it. Not so. It is free for anyone who is willing to do the work to realize it. Some major universities offer free online classes to any interested person. You can sign up and audit (means no credit) college classes. However, you must follow the same curriculum as real students. If you are willing to put in the effort, you can have advanced knowledge for free.

THE GAY STORY

It appears that "gay" was originally a code word so that like minded people could meet. The percentage of gays has remained pretty constant over time and different cultures have different approaches to this. Even today, gays are beheaded in Saudi. Kings with harems liked gays because they were stronger than girls and could be trusted to guard the girls since they had no interest in them. In the US, being gay was first a crime. Gays were picked up by the police who tortured them until they gave the names of their friends. Then the friends got the same treatment and so on. Then it was decided to make gay an "illness" instead of a crime and send gays to psychiatrists who drugged and shocked them. When this had no effect, Dr. Heath at Tulane University in New Orleans said, "Wait. I can fix this". Heath took gay guys, put electrodes in their brains to places he believed were "pleasure centers", hooked them up to batteries (or whatever), and locked them in a room with naked girls. However, the guys showed no interest in the girls. This experiment is classic and referenced in medical textbooks. When psychiatrists met at their annual convention, this issue was brought up. It was suggested that, since gays cannot be changed to straight even by extreme methods, that the easy way out was simply to erase gay from the list of "illnesses". So, they did. Now, gays were free and so they demanded rights to get married, get social security benefits and so on. That's where we are today.

Now, let's compare this to real science. Say, chemists have a convention. One chemist says, "Look at all these elements - there are just too many of them". Another, "Right on! We don't need all these. Put up the list." Another, "What about hydrogen - it's a flammable gas and could explode." Another, "Just erase it from the list. Bad, bad hydrogen." Another, "What about all those radioactive elements. They could hurt people. We have to protect people from themselves - get rid of them. Erase them from the list". Another, "Right on! Let's do it."

Now, you know this would never happen. However, no one objects when psychiatrists "imagine illnesses into existence" and "erase them from existence" when it suits their purpose. Something doesn't look right.

The Supreme Court has now ruled that adults have the right to have any relationship they choose between each other. However, this does not legalize relationships between adults and children.

Regardless, sex between adults and kids - especially young boys - has been popular throughout time. The Catholic Church has always been involved in this. Some Priest grabs a kid and says, "I am god so you must obey - bend over - and don't talk about this or you will burn in hell". Ever since it's inception, the Boy Scouts has believed that all young boys should have a gay experience - with other boys or a adult. However, times change, and the "don't talk" stuff no longer works. Previously, the scouts have covered up revealed incidents by saying this was just "isolated". Now, the boy scouts has filed for bankruptcy because too many "isolated" have resulted lawsuits. The Catholics just don't care. They are an international corporation and can deal with "silly local laws that get in their way".

ALL ABOUT LSD

LSD (d-lysergic acid diethylamide) was discovered accidentally by a researcher employed by Sandoz laboratories. The researcher's name was Hoffman. Hoffman rode to work on his bike. After making what would become LSD, he was riding home and passed through a field of wheat/corn and the plants started talking to him. He thought, "Plants don't talk. Something's not right". So the next day he deliberately took some of the stuff and everything started talking. Of course, he reported this and Sandoz got a patent on the stuff. This was 1947. The discovery and manufacturing process was published in the 1947 edition of Chemical Abstracts.

The general public would not be introduced to LSD until much later. This happened when a college professor named Timothy Leary started passing out LSD - which was totally unregulated at the time - to his students. Well, news travels fast on college campuses and soon LSD became very popular. Now, during the missing years since discovery, it is a good guess that the government played with this stuff and it is known that they definitely used it afterwards.

Sandoz totally investigated LSD and all these details have been known for some time. Hoffman wrote in Chemical Abstracts that the recommended dose of LSD was 20 to 50 micrograms. Sandoz trained people to be "LSD Technicians". These people would sit with someone who went on an "LSD trip" to make sure they had a good trip and talk them through any problems. There was a specific diet to follow before your trip. There were certain foods to avoid such as bananas (problem with serotonin) and other stuff. People who were prepared generally had good trips. Unprepared people and especially people given LSD without their knowledge had a random chance of good, bad or terrible experiences.

The government thought LSD could be weaponized. If an enemy was off in "la la land", you could just walk in and, say, conquer someplace and meet no resistance. They fooled around and developed something that would send off on a trip that would last two weeks or more. They were happy. This was just great!

Today, LSD is a Schedule I controlled substance. But, that does not mean you can't get it. Accredited research labs and major universities all have Schedule I permits and can order the stuff. It is kind of pricy - well over fifty dollars for one milligram of reagent grade LSD.

MONARCH PROGRAMMING

Monarch programming is a technique to cause someone's mind to fracture. These fractures are called "alters" (alternate personalities). Each alter can be programmed with a different personality and then "locked". Once locked, the victim has no knowledge the alter exists. Alters are unlocked with "keys". A key can be a spoken phrase, a sequence of musical notes, a sequence of tones or various other methods. The feature film "Telefon" <https://www.imdb.com/title/tt0076804/> illustrates this.

A pioneer of monarch programming was Josef Mengele (Dr. Green in the US). He would take two boys and sit them next to each other. Then he would take a daisy (flower) and start pulling off the petals. When he plucked the last petal, he would kill one of the boys in front of the other. The object was to cause the mind of the still living boy to fracture.

The US uses monarch programming on people. One very high level is known as a Presidential Model. Presidential Models are girls whose primary function is to provide sex for visiting dignitaries. No girl programmed in this way is ever supposed to recall what she did when switched into an alter. However, two girls who went public did. They are Cathy O'Brine and Sue Ford (uses name Brice Taylor). Both girls have books and have made you tube videos. Sue Ford (Brice Taylor) wrote a book titled "Thanks For the Memories" which is highly recommended. Her "memories" are things the US does that no one is ever supposed to know. This book will give you a very good look into the "shadow government" which you are not even supposed to know exists at all. Go get it!

Interesting examples of what trauma can do can be found in such films as Stephen King's classic, "Carrie" - <https://www.imdb.com/title/tt0074285/>

REMOTE VIEWING

Pioneering research in remote viewing was reportedly done at the Stanford Research Institution (SRI). SRI is the top secret division of Stanford University. Any qualified person can be accepted to attend Stanford University but you will need a "Q" clearance to walk across the street to SRI.

Actually, SRI did not find anything new. Remote viewing is a natural skill. Many animals do this naturally. American Indians called it a "vision quest". The information we have on the government's remote viewer program comes from the book "Psychic Warrior" by David Morehouse. This book is still available and is recommended.

Government remote viewers are trained to travel in time - to the past or future. Remote viewing involves creating a thought form and sending it to view the target location. Remote viewing is not Astral projection. Remote viewers are awake and talking to their "controller" when they are viewing. The viewers lock on to the theta brain wave frequency to do viewing. This is really nothing new - when tribal people beat drums, they are providing a theta reference and drums have been around a long time.

Anyway, when developed, the government thought they had found "something new" and remote viewers were treated quite well.

Morehouse appeared on the TV show "Sightings" with his father and things not in his book were discussed. You can look up this series on the internet.

Morehouse quit the program when it was decided to train viewers to kill people. As punishment he was sent to a psychiatrist to be destroyed. He lost everything. Wife left. There is a happy ending, however. A friend knew an Indian Shaman (these people know how to do stuff) who used his skills to reverse the damage done by the psychiatrist and restore Morehouse to health. He got his wife back and started teaching remote viewing.

WHAT DOES THE GOVERNMENT KNOW

Well, they know quite a lot and they have known this "quite a lot" for a long time. To avoid drifting off topic, we present here references which should give you some insight as to what is going on that you don't know. You are off to a good start if you have read Sue Ford's book referenced earlier. But, there's stuff she did not know. Another good book is "Montauk Revisited" by Peter Moon and Prestin Nichols. Dr. Steven Greer is not shy about revealing government secrets and you can find him at <https://siriusdisclosure.com/>. Also, you can look up Dr. Greer. The best search engine today is yandex.com which is the Russian search engine. Since the US is heavy into censorship, you get more and better search results on yandex.

SUMMARY

Guess you have heard, "If it looks like a duck and quacks like a duck, then it's probably a duck". So, the argument is: If psychiatry looks like a "cult/religion" and behaves like a cult/religion, then it likely is a cult/religion, So, what is the Government doing financing some religion/cult thing in a country where the Constitution says, "Separation of Church and State". Nobody asks this. Nobody asks how you can "vote science into existence". Guess they don't care or are too stupid to figure this stuff out.